PREDICT FURTHER ACTION TO RELIEVE EAST COAST OIL AND "GAS" SHORTAGE; NEED ALL THE "BREAKS" FOR 10 WEEKS

Says Pleasure Driving in Taxi-Cabs Must Be Eliminated — Plans for Further Reduction in Gasoline Consumption in Course of Preparation if Pleasure Driving Fails

By Phillips J. Peck
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—As the ODT prepared to halt pleasure driving in taxicabs, an official of the Petroleum Administration for War predicted today that further action will be necessary to relieve the East Coast oil and gasoline shortage.

The statement came from R. L. Minckler, PAW director of supply, on the heels of a reduction in gasoline rations; a 10 percent cut in home fuel oil rations for heating period three; a 25 percent slash in commercial heating oil supplies and the ban on pleasure driving.

He asserted that "we'd need all the breaks"—in weather, military demands and everything else—to get by for the next 10 weeks as the Atlantic Seaboard picture stands at present.

An official of the Office of Defense Transportation said that "pleasure travel via taxicab must be eliminated," and disclosed that action to bring taxicabs under the East Coast pleasure driving ban would be taken.

At the same time, an OPA spokesman conceded that plans to accomplish a further reduction in gasoline consumption were in the course of preparation for use in event that the pleasure-driving ban fails to effect the necessary saving.

It was reported previously that Petroleum Administrator Ickes had recommended a cut in "A" gasoline rations in the 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia.

Minckler said that there was still a deficit between the 1,171,000 barrels of fuel oil, kerosene and gasoline, which was established as the daily civilian quota in the east during January, and the amount of petroleum being brought into the area.

He explained that the deficit currently was being made up out of the East's reserve stocks which are slowly dwindling.

"We're trying to get through to the end of March, to the end of the winter heating season," he said. "We'll use up all the reserves, if necessary, to get through to the end of the heating season. The strain will be eased then."

Meantime, the economics committee of the petroleum war council estimated that the prospective Eastern deficit—before recent OPA actions cutting fuel oil and gasoline rations—was 345,000 barrels daily for February.

The decrease in the deficit next month is forecast because of anticipated completion of the Texas-Illinois segment of the 24-inch emergency pipeline being built to the East Coast.

The OPA actions were estimated to have saved between 125,000 and 150,000 barrels, still leaving a sizeable deficit.

"East Coast stocks of all petroleum products already are at critical levels and are declining at an alarming rate," the committee said.

The committee suggested that new tankers might spend their break-in periods carrying oil from the Gulf Coast to the East Coast, which would have the added advantage of facilitating repairs and adjustments.

During January, the committee estimated deliveries of petroleum to the East at about 1,146,000 barrels daily, while the "rationed civilian consumption and military demands (figured before the OPA cuts) will average 1,491,000 barrels a day. Deliveries next month probably will increase to 1,226,000 barrels daily, while demand should decrease to 1,429,000 barrels a day, the group said.

GIVES DETAILS OF HIS TRIP TO NORTH AFRICA

Sgt. John Tomlinson is Serving Overseas With Army Air Corps

IN A HUGE CONVOY

Sgt. John Tomlinson, who left the United States for England in September, and who arrived in Africa in November, is enjoying his unusual experience in service with the U. S. Army Air Corps.

Sgt. Tomlinson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tomlinson, Walnut street. He recounts some details of the trip to North Africa in the following letter written to his parents:

Dearest Mother, Father, Naomi and Al:

Well, it's been some time since you have received a letter from me, but of course I guess you can quite well understand why.

It is no longer a military secret concerning our whereabouts. Perhaps you have read in the papers, and listened or heard rather on the radio of the American troops invading North Africa.

Such a gigantic movement of troops was made possible by the "Grace of God" and secondly by the extreme secrecy under which the details and plans were carried out. However, what I am about to write to you is no longer secret because of its wide publication in American, English and French newspapers, and of course over the radio.

In the inky blackness of the early morning hours of Sunday, Nov. 8th, the largest amphibious movement ever made in world history made its way over the comparatively placid waters of the blue Mediterranean Sea.

Some several hours previous to dropping of anchors, we were thrilled at the sight of the silhouette of that huge hulk of rock known to us all as "The Rock of Gibraltar" and nicknamed by the English sailors "Gib." As we continued on through the "Straight of Gibraltar" our eyes were attracted by the towns brilliantly lighted on both the Spanish and French North African coasts. The first towns we have seen lighted since we left the States.

The convoy, as later revealed by Lord Littleton, Minister of Production from England, now stationed in New York, consisted of (censored) troop and cargo ships and (censored) naval vessels ranging from (censored) to battleships. The percentage of losses as predicted by military authorities was rather high, but again the seemingly impossible has been accomplished with no loss of life or ship, for which all the praise and thanks goes to God our heavenly Father.

Perhaps you folks back home know better than we just how things are progressing, but from what can be gathered I believe everything is progressing very satisfactorily. We get an occasional bit of news and it is all very encouraging.

When you get a chance to write again, one of the bits of news I'm eager to know is the result of Bristol-Morrisville game.

The next time you write to Felix, Raymond and Albert, remember me to them, and you might tell me in your next letter all you can about them. I've been thinking much about them since I've been over here.

SCOUTS TO START TRAINING COURSE HERE

First Class To Open Sunday, Jan. 10th, in Scout Room of Presbyterian Church

IT IS OPEN TO ALL

Walter W. Pitzonka, president of the Bucks County Council Boy Scouts of America announced today that starting January 10th and for the following two Sundays, a training course would be given in the Fundamentals of the Boy Scout Movement, starting at two o'clock in the afternoon and closing by six p. m. The first session will be held on January 10th in the scout room in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, Bristol, and on the following Sunday, a similar course will be held at Quakertown in the Borough Hall, starting at the same time. The final meeting will be held on January 24th in Doylestown in the Men's Jury Room of the Court House.

Mr. Pitzonka pointed out that S. A. Miller, chairman of training, at a recent meeting of his committee, decided that in view of war conditions, it was better to hold these four-hour sessions at three different points in the county rather than at one central place as in the past. The faculty will consist of Lloyd S. Bucher and S. A. Miller, South Langhorne; F. P. Kemmerer, Sellersville; Jesse Wandkos, Andalusia; and Scout Executive Robert B. Goeller.

"It is hoped that all scouters and cubbers new and old will attend one of these district sessions. Any one who has no connection with scouting but who would like to give service to Bucks county boys is invited to attend and learn the aims and purposes of the Boy Scout Movement," said Mr. Pitzonka.

President Pitzonka concluded by stating that the finance campaign had now reached a total of $13,570.69, but that he felt by the end of the month it would reach $14,000, which would be several hundred dollars ahead of the total of a year ago.

PLAN TRANSPORT CHANGES FOR PUPILS IN BENSALEM TWP.

Recommendations Made By The ODT To Bensalem School Board

BLDGS. ARE CROWDED

Suggestion Made That Possibly Some Stops Can Be Eliminated

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 9.—Recommendations for transportation changes were received by the Bensalem Township board of school directors in meeting on Thursday evening, in such the ODT suggesting that possibly some stops now made by school buses be eliminated. The desire is to have at least a full quarter mile between stops.

It was also suggested that transportation of pupils to and from schools be limited to those living two miles or more from the school buildings.

Russell Tomlinson, vice-president, was in the chair. Directors also considered at length the crowded conditions of the buildings in the township, planning to reduce such to a possible extent. They considered possibility of holding some classes during the late afternoon.

Dr. Davis, a Federal employee, and Dr. Ake, of the Penna. Department of Public Instruction, visited the schools yesterday, to glean enrollment facts, and to go over housing facilities. They stated that the high school building capacity is 645 whereas in September the students cared for there totaled 850.

Calendar of events for January was presented, and committee reports heard. A goodly profit was reported from the cafeteria.

A list of criticisms from the Commission on Secondary Schools, Philadelphia, was received in connection with the teachers and courses committee report. Recommendations were considered, some having already been carried out and other changes planned for the immediate future or for next school term.

A further discussion also occurred on the Victory Corps program.

It Is Not OPA Violation To Drive For License To Wed

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 9.—Although it may be a pleasure ride to carry out the advance details, Joseph Keating, Bristol, deputy Clerk of Orphans' Court of Bucks county, said today that in his opinion it is not violating any OPA gas regulations to drive to the County Seat to get a marriage license.

Many couples planning marriage however, go direct to a Justice of the Peace and make application for the license and the Justice then transacts the business, saving gasoline for the applicants, and in most cases he performs the marriage ceremony at the expiration of the three days' wait required by law.

The marriage license business in Bucks county in 1942 fell off about 15 percent over the previous year. There were 1479 licenses granted last year in the county, and about 60 percent of those went to non-residents, most of them coming here from Philadelphia and Trenton.

WHAT SHAPES HUMAN EVENTS?

Is it a fact that the course of human events is shaped more by general causes than by individual action? Among scientists there are two schools of thought, but to this question Dr. Irving Langmuir, Nobel prize winner for work in surface chemistry and retiring head of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, returns an emphatic "No!"

He has little patience with recent collegiate teaching in America to the effect that virtually cosmic causes determine wars and the rise and fall of nations.

Were such the case, it would be necessary to regard the Axis, for example, in its war of conquest and ruthless oppression, as inevitable, owing little or nothing to the dynamics of a Hitler, a Mussolini, or the military clique that rules Japan.

Supporters of general causes rather than of driving or inspiring leadership, as dominating the course of events, fall back upon the theory that the circumstance brings forth the man. They seem to allow all too little to the human equation when it becomes a question of arousing and keeping national dissatisfaction at high pitch.

Would there be such a Nazi Germany as exists today without a cumingly selective employment of the philosophy of Nietzsche coupled with the almost deification of Der Fuehrer?

Obviously both general causes and individual action combine to shape events, as Professor Langmuir insists, at least in a world as varied and involved as that of today.
In the school of thought that holds economics can become an exact science capable of making a permanently contented world the noted chemist has little faith, if only because "human affairs are characterized by a complexity of a far higher order than that encountered ordinarily in the field of science."

He says of suggestions that alternating periods of prosperity and depression can be permanently abandoned by economic forethought:

"I believe the field of application of science in such problems is extremely limited. A scientist has to define his problem and usually has to bring about simplified conditions for his experiments, which exclude undesired factors. So the economist has to invent an 'economic man,' who always does the thing expected of him."

Doctor Langmuir would not for a moment have intuition left out of the equation in dealing with the course of human affairs. But he would not award it undue importance.

LEASE-LEND TO AFRICA

One of the ways by which the United States will help rehabilitate French North Africa will be a lot of long-distance farming. Hitler cleared the country out of everything. Industry is short of coal and petroleum. Goods to be dispatched will exceed $50,000,000 in value.

The United States expects to be repaid in raw materials and in foodstuffs to help feed United States troops when North African crops are harvested. Seed and insecticides are being dispatched and fruit and vegetable crops will be available in six months.

A cigar shortage is now developing, it is reported. What the country may need soon will be a good twenty-five cent cigar.

The ghost of an ill-fated secret romance haunts Kay Wentworth, 24, as she comes to Cliffport, Maine, where her father, Philip, noted harbor engineer, is in charge of a U. S. defense project. Five years before, Kay had eloped with Bruce Jollimar, who disappeared after a brief honeymoon. She knew he had come from Cliffport but her early inquiries disclosed no trace of him. Kay wrote to New York asking her Aunt Millie to visit her.
The Wentworths are living on part of the old Ellis Burton estate that is still in litigation. Kay is in love with Allan Reid, her father's assistant. She meets Galathea Burton, described as "a crippled recluse," but who proves to be the beautiful and talented "Vanitas," artist and designer. She also becomes acquainted with the local Society dewar-dictator, Aunt Grace Libby, Prof. Henry Stoddard, an elderly, arrogant, caretaker of the "new Burton house," whose "sore hands" cause some alarm; Nettie and Mae, veteran servants; Conley Forrestall, local saboteur; and others. Returning from the move-ies one night, Kay is sure she saw Bruce Jollimar, but he eludes her.
Allan Reid proposes and is shocked when she tells him of her secret marriage. He identifies Jollimar as the missing Burton heir and agrees to help Kay locate him. At Mrs.
Grace Libby's party, Mrs. Master-man and Woodill debate radium poisoning in connection with Robert's "sore hands." Later, Aunt Grace Libby angrily rebukes her niece, Stella Avery, when the latter warns Kay that "Gala" Burton is a husband-stealer. Kay is narrating the story, Mrs. Libby is talking.

CHAPTER NINE

"Told you she was a snake. Knew this was coming!" Mrs. Libby, her eyebrows knitted, sat down also.
"It's an obsession with her. Seems to get a kick out of the strange fact that the most beautiful girl in town wanted to elope with the nitwit she'd picked for herself."

"But how could she! I mean, Gala. She's clever and cultured. I don't understand. He's such a—such a nothing at all," I stammered unhappily.

Mrs. Libby shrugged. "No accounting for so-called 'love.' Plays funny tricks on people. And maybe she didn't elope at all. Pretty Boy swore up and down he'd been merely giving her a lift. But then, he would say that, to save his precious skin."

Gala and that nonentity! I couldn't believe it. He probably had told the truth when he said he'd only been taking her some place.
That horrible woman would distort the facts."

And the accident. How poor Gala must have suffered—was still suffering five long years!

Involuntarily I had compared my own fate with hers.

I too had suffered for five years.
But now it was almost over. The sun was coming out between the clouds.

Her anguish would go on for the rest of her life. An amputation—it was a barrier, shutting out all chances of happiness.

Or—was it?

For no special reason I began to wonder what Dad would say, how he would look when I told him of Gala's misfortune.

On the way home from the Libby house, Aunt Millie announced we would have luncheon guests the next day.

"Your landlord by proxy, and that bald-headed little Professor Stoddard. I asked the Forrestall ladies too—in Kay's name, of course—but they had a previous engagement. I begged Forrestall to show me over the new Burton house, so called, and he only could make it in his lunchtime. That's how come," she explained to Dad.

"Can you and Allan take time off for playing tourists?"

Dad shook his head. "Not a chance. We aren't coming in for lunch. The government wants a rush job, what with the news from Europe getting blacker by the hour.
I'm even having the office shack enlarged and a shower put in, so Allan can sleep there if necessary.
I'm afraid, Kay, our work is going to eat into his evenings with you."

"But not into yours, with—Gala?" Aunt Millie asked innocently.

It was a perfect opening for telling them what I had learned. But Dad's little-boy embarrassment, the flood of red that mounted into his wind-blown face, was so revealing I hadn't the heart to do it, and came to his rescue instead with a question.

"How did Professor Stoddard get mixed up in the invitation?"

"He 'wiggled in,' " Aunt Millie said placidly. "Targeted after me when I buttonholed Forrestall. And when he heard me rave about the er—wholesome beauties of the Victorian era he must have confounded the sofa curves I was talking about with his evenings with you."

"But not into yours, with—Gala?" Aunt Millie asked innocently.

The ground floor was much as I had pictured it, a succession of huge, somber rooms with enormous mantelpieces, dark, ornate woodwork, dark heavy hangings, unwieldy, tufted sofas and chairs, and many long, narrow windows reaching to the ceiling virtually from the floor.

The windows were the only part of the stuffy splendor that interested me, and not for their decorative value. Typical of the period, they consisted of two sliding panes ing about with the ladies of the period. Anyway, he piped up "Metoo, pretty please," so—what could I do but say you'd be delighted?"

I didn't relish the prospect of the nosy little Professor's company on our personally conducted tour. But there was nothing I could do about it.

Nor did I have an occasion for begging Allan to run into town under some pretext and come with us.
Dad prevented it by making him say good night at the door, ostensibly because of an early start in the morning, but really, I believe, as further proof of the new order of things.

In spite of these minor annoyances I slept like a top—dreamless and without the slightest premoni-tion of the horrors not twenty-four hours away—and woke, for a wonder, to a warm, bright day that made the garden unfold miraculously and visibly.

The joy was short-lived though.
By the time we started for the Burton house in the early afternoon, the sun had disappeared and the sky was so clouded and threatening that Aunt Millie took her umbrella along.

For some reason Forrestall didn't let us cross the gardens, but insisted on marching us out the front door and down the street, around the corner and up the wide granite steps of the pseudo-Renaissance Burton atrocity.

Roberts opened the pretentious entrance for us—sour-faced, with spotless white gloves and camouflaged in an ill-fitting butler's uniform—and we filed past him into the gloomy hall; I with a beating heart and leaving my fingers crossed, Aunt Millie with an expectant sniff, Conley Forrestall with a slight show of pomposity and Professor Stoddard—?

It is hard to determine, in view of the tragedy that followed, whether my impressions of that day were concurrent or retrospective.
But I am pretty sure I did feel a tension in him the moment he appeared at the house, over-apolgetic and brimming with protestations of fastened by a simple catch, and were doubling for doors in the "Back Parlor," facing a wide, covered porch.

I kept looking at these windows speculatively, all during Aunt Millie's "beauties" around her in which, incidentally, she showed up Professor Stoddard's ignorance of his alleged pet hobby by naming two contemporary New York decorators as the creators of the Style Victoria, unchallenged. The windows might come in handy, if all else failed—

But I wouldn't need them. We'd discover Bruce any minute now. I encouraged myself, when presently we were mounting the stairs to the second floor, and Conley Forrestall explained.

"The rooms below were—by ever used by the family. Now we are coming to the interesting part of the house, where Ellis Burton and his son really lived."

Why didn't anyone ever call Bruce by his real name? I reminded—

"They are kept in readiness for the heir's return, to the last, least detail," he went on with his ballyhoo, throwing open the door of a comfortable-looking bedroom. "This was his room—in here. The bed is made up. Show them, Roberts—"

Roberts said "Yes sir" clumsily and lifted a silken spread to expose snowy linen sheets.

"The hot water's on top. The thermostat is kept going the year round to that end. The telephone is connected and on in the light. It's turned off up here, but Roberts has only to throw on the main switch in the basement. And the staff can be assembled in an hour. They all have positions they can leave at once."

"My brother's help included?" Aunt Millie asked suspiciously.

"Oh, no, no, indeed! Nettie and Mae have always longed to go to the ground floor of the—case," For-restall reassured her.

Club Women Informed Of Activities of The F. B. I.

An unusually large group of Travel Club members and guests enjoyed an address given by George Stevens, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, yesterday afternoon in the club home.

The president, Mrs. E. Linton Martin, extended a hearty welcome, then turned the program over to Mrs. Charles Peet, who introduced the guest speaker. Mrs. Peet mentioned that women are concerned primarily with what they can do on the home front in the present emergency, she adding that one thing they were taking advantage of yesterday was in gaining knowledge of the operation of the FBI.

Mr. Stevens recalled how the FBI has been more in the public eye since September of 1939 when leaders of the nation saw the far-reaching influence of the FBI.

The three main avenues in which the FBI centers its activities were then enlarged upon, they including: Espionage, which is centuries old; sabotage, which is comparatively new and which came into great use during World War I; and mail frauds and use of mail to contact agents in other countries.

Mr. Stevens stated that the FBI is a fine co-ordinating agency and directing force. He explained in detail the value of fingerprints in catching offenders. The women were told that five million fingerprints (those of law-abiding civilians as well as of criminals) are on file in Washington. He told of how such are tabulated and classified, informing that the fingerprint of an individual does not change from the time of birth to death.

It was announced by Mrs. Russell W. DeLong that $41 was cleared on the Christmas card party.

A discussion took place regarding eliminating of some sessions in the club home, due to cut in fuel oil. The meeting scheduled for January 22nd, with a special speaker and with the juniors as guests, has been postponed until late Spring. In February there will be but one session, this being on the 5th, an address on international affairs being followed by a Valentine tea.

Predict Further Action To Relieve East Coast Oil And Gasoline Shortage

"After February the situation will be more comfortable for several months," the committee said.

The committee recommended that, in future rationing programs, the outstanding coupons be "more closely adjusted to supplies available."

Price Administrator Leon Henderson ruled, meanwhile, that all dealers and secondary suppliers of fuel oil must sell any amount of their supply to any purchaser who presents the necessary coupons. No customer can be considered "favored" above any other, he said, except where a local emergency requires distribution of supplies according to PAW's priority list.

The OPA chief explained that the "non-discrimination" regulation will prevent situations from arising where one or two dealers, with ample stocks, refuse to fill the tanks of other dealers or householders despite the fact these buyers are able to present ration coupons.

"The concentration of available fuel oil supplies in the hands of a few dealers and secondary suppliers who have been selling only to certain selected purchasers, has greatly aggravated the fuel oil problem in Washington, New York, Boston and other large cities," he said.

"This has given rise to such intolerable situations as home-owners, with tanks dangerously low, being unable to purchase oil despite the fact there may be thousands of gallons of oil in the particular locality."

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — (INS) —

Through a combination of gas rationing—which is causing people to remain at home—and the current "keep warm" motif, unusual emphasis is being placed on new negligee and robe fashions this year. Elegance and comfort are successfully combined in the new styles to make them definitely appealing as to looks and purpose.

One of the new styles popular with the younger women is the coat-length robe, because it is suitable for wear over pajamas or slacks and its short length is less hampering. Dolores Moran, young Warner Bros. player seen in "Gentleman Jim," has a double-breasted model in slate-blue flannel. It is tailored with a notched collar and four slot pockets bound in brown braid, and has brown buttons.

Bette Davis, starring in Warner

Bros' "Now Voyager," has a lovely jersey housecoat-robe styled on the slim, easy lines of a dinner gown. In jade green, it features soft drapery in the high-necked bodice, and slim skirt slit at the front. Gold nailhead trim in a plastron effect is a bright accent.

Susan Hayward has a clever chenille robe in turquoise blue. It features a heart motif—worked in the chenille—around a skirt flounce, on the pocket and at the back of the robe from neckline to waistline.

A full-length tailored robe in pin-waled, black velvet corduroy is the choice of Brenda Marshall, lovely Warner Bros. star. It is styled with a high, notched collar and a fly-front closing. "Brenda" is embroidered in bright red down the left-front of the skirt.

Marlene Dietrich adds a touch of glamour to her soft, plushy cotton robe in blue. Ermine tails are worked across the squared shoulders.
